Okay, who's about ready to pass out from the painterly, gorgeous garden?!

Rebecca Sams and Buell Steelman of the Eugene, Oregon design firm Mosaic Gardens updated the aesthetic of a traditional cottage garden with newer plant varieties, the addition of a large Vietnamese urn and basalt pathways, and more contemporary design concepts. The result is a garden that has the soft feel of a cottage garden but with less maintenance, a much longer peak season, and fewer temptation for hungry deer. "When carefully selected and placed, these plants offer a sculptural whimsy that underscores the romantic classic feel of the garden," says Rebecca. We could not agree more.
